DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

This action is in response to the amendment submitted on January 2, 2003. It is acknowledged that claims 7, 17, and 22 are cancelled.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office Action.

Due to Applicants' amendments, the previous rejection of claim 17 under 35 USC 112, 2nd paragraph is withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

Due to Applicants' amendments, the previous rejections of claims 1-11, 14-21, and 24-29 under 35 USC 102(e) are withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

Claims 1-29 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kroll et al., U.S. Pat. No. 6,432,547 B1.

Kroll shows a breathable film layer composition comprising water soluble polyethylene oxide and biodegradable polycaprolactone (aliphatic polyester) (column 5, lines 7-13 and column 6, lines 17-22) wherein the film is breathable and has a water vapor transmission rate of at least 100 g/m²/day (Abstract). Kroll shows that the film comprises about 10wt% to about 75wt% of the polymer mixture (column 1, lines 28-40). Kroll shows that the film's thickness is about 50 microns (about 2 mils) (claim 1). Kroll shows that the composition is used for forming breathable film layers and articles constructed therefrom (precursor film) (Abstract).

Kroll does not specifically show the elongation at break as in instant claims 1, 12-13, and 23. However, such a range of percentages of the elongation at break is a property which can be easily determined by one of ordinary skill in the art. With regard to the limitation of the elongation at break, absent a showing of unexpected results, it is obvious to modify the conditions of a composition because they are merely the result of routine experimentation. The experimental modification of prior art in order to optimize operation conditions (e.g. elongation at break) fails to render claims patentable in the absence of unexpected results. All of the aforementioned limitations are result-effective as they control the flexibility and mechanical strength of the film. As such, they are optimizable. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to make the film with the limitations of the elongation at break since it has been held that discovering an optimum value of a result effective variable involves only routine skill in the art. In re Boesch, 617 F.2d 272, 205 USPQ 215 (CCPA 1980).

Response to Arguments

Applicants' argument filed January 2, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

On pages 3-5, Applicants argue that Kroll fails to teach or suggest Applicants' invention because Kroll does not show the same additional processing steps after the mixing of two polymers together. Applicants argue that the instant invention is formed by stretching while being in contact with water or a solvent to achieve the claimed breathability and elongation-at-break. This argument is unpersuasive. Such process steps introduce process limitations to the product claim, if at all claimed. The patentability of a product does not depend on its method of production. If the product in the product by process claim is the same as or obvious from a product of the prior art, the claims are unpatentable even though the prior art was made by a different process. MPEP 2113. Further, process limitations are given no patentable weight in product claims.

Conclusion

Applicant's AMENDMENT necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a).

Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
